DEATH AFTER FORTUNE

CORNELIUS JOHNSON DIED BEFORE HE COULD ENJOY HIS MONEY.

He Received One-Half of the Reward Paid for the Arrest of Murderer Ruthven.

After many years of suffering from consumption and also much suffering from lack of money for proper medical attention, Cornelius Johnson, colored, came yesterday into possession of $500. The money was one-half the sum paid by the Cleveland authorities for the arrest and delivery of Ed Ruthven, the colored murderer, who was shot here by Detective Gerber who was shot here by Detective Gerber there has been some talk of Mr. Shanklin while attempting to shoot Captain Kinney, as a candidate for national committeeman

The money was received from Cleveland yesterday by draft. When given to Johnson he inquired of the detectives if they did not get any of it, and when told that the rest went into the pension fund he divided one-half with the detectives. He was then asked what he was going to do with the rest. "Gwine back to my home in Georgia," he said, and then left the office. It was then about 2:30 p. m. About 3:15 p. m. Johnson walked into Huder's drug store at Pennsylvania and Washington street and asked for a remedy of some sort. He was unable to talk plainly, and while the attendant was endeavoring to understand what was said the man began coughing, and covered the floor with blood from a hemorrhage of the lungs. He building, but he got no farther than the door. He was then carried into the base-ment and died there before a physician could reach him. In his pocket was found an envelope containing the remainder of his share of the reward, $245.95. He had been drinking, and it was thought in his ndition the liquor had hastened his eath. He was immediately recognized by

Johnson lived at 1134 Lafayette street, and was a familiar character to the police and has often been sentenced from Police Court to the workhouse. It was through him that the detectives first got the information that Ruthven was in this city, and it was Johnson who kept a lookout for him and advised the officers of his presence in the house where Captain Kinney so nearly lost his life. His body was sent to the morgue, where it was viewed by the coroner. His relatives live at Macon, Ga.

years old, and one of the best-known citizens in Indiana. He served with distinction in both the Mexican and civil wars. He enlisted in the Mexican war at Chillicothe, O., when but twenty-one years of age, and served as lieutenant and captain during that war in the Second Regiment of Ohio Volunteers. He moved from Chillicothe to Indianapolis in 1852, and has lived here ever since. He opened a hatter's store n this city, and for a long time conducted the business on West Washington street on the site now occupied by the Bowen-Merrill Book Company. When the Pike's Peak gold excitement broke out, in 1859, he joined a party of prospectors and went to Colorado, where he met with little success. Shortly after he returned home the civil war broke out, and Mr. McGinnis, who had been connected with one of the independent military companies of Indianapolis, enlisted as a private in Company K, Eleventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, for the three tary experience the next day after his enlistment Mr. McGinnis was promoted from the ranks to a captaincy, and on April 25, 1861, was commissioned a lieutenant colonel. The colonel of the regiment, Lew Wallace. was made a brigadier general, and on Sept. 3, 1861, General McGinnis was commissioned colonel of the Eleventh to succeed Colonel Wallace. General McGinnis was in many battles, and participated in many campaigns, rendering his country distinguished service. Previous to his service in the civil war General McGinnis was a Democrat. but from the day he enlisted, in 1861, he has been a Republican, and, although many ticket were made to him after the close of the war, he declined them all, saying that he was no longer a Democrat and could not Marion county soon after the war, but has since held no elective office. General McGinnis has been prominently mentioned for postmaster on former occasions. He was mentioned for the place of costmaster after the death of William Walace, who was succeeded by Edward P. He Is Wanted for Stealing Bicycles in This City.

Charles Hart, better known to the police byville and brought to this city last night by Detective Asch. Hart is wanted here for stealing a number of bicycles. Several days ago a wheel was stolen from the alley west of the New York Store and recovered a few minutes later at the Palm Garden on East Washington street. A messenger boy who had the wheel said he had been hired to deliver it there, and was released. Hart appeared about the time the messenger General McGinnis is now seventy-five boy got there with the wheel and ran upon seeing Patrolman Shine. He admits also stealing another wheel which he claims he left in the waiting room at the Union station. The officers think they can trace otner stolen bicycles to the prisoner. He had in his pocket a book containing several numbers, names, addresses, and dates.

Mr. Parry was himself interested in hurrying through with the business part of the session, since he had arranged an informal reception and buffet lunch for the members of the Board of Trade and friends.

The principal business transacted was the submission by Secretary Smith of the full list of standing committees for the ensuing year. These committees were chosen by a nominating committee, appointed for the purpose, composed of Albert Sahm, John J. Appel, Charles C. Perry, L. J. Blaker and E. E. Perry. Jacob W. Smith was also reelected secretary for another term. He at once announced that the present assistant secretary, Hugh S. Byrkic, would be retained on account of his efficiency. The election of W. B. Holton as vice president created a vacancy in the board of governors, which was filled last night by the election of Albert Baker. The grain committee submitted a written An official of the Union Railway Com- report announcing the selection of the present corps of inspectors to continue the

"The guests will be taken to the Belt railroad on the west side of the city immediately upon their arrival at the Union Station; then a trip will be made around the belt, returning to the station. The party will then proceed to their hotels, where they have already arranged for dinner After dinner the reception committees of the Board of Trade and Commercial Club will take the visitors for a ride on the trolley cars to Fairview Park, coming back by the way of Central avenue to the German House, where the remainder of the time until departure of the train will be taken up in inspecting the 'quality of Cincinnati water' and in listening to eloquent speeches from representative citizens of Indianapo lis. The orators will be John L. Griffiths and John B. Cockrum.' The last business before adjournment for luncheon was the making of an order pro report of the Board of Trade, to be distributed to members and such other persons as may be interested in securing them. The eatables provided by President Parry were of a most appetizing variety, consisting of chicken, ham and cheese sand-wiches, olives, pickles, coffee and fruit Cigars in great profusion were within easy reach. WILL SHAKE THINGS UP.

Mr. Parry Wants to See Board of Trade in New Building.

"I intend to get things to moving so lively around here that this building will get too small to hold us," said D. M. Parry, the newly elected president of the Board of Trade, at the meeting last night. "I have several 'pet projects' in mind," he continued, "and one of them is the selling of this out of date building, situated in an out of the way place, and the erection of a handsome modern structure more nearly in the business heart of Indianapolis. 1 want to see the time come when the Board of Trade will live up to its articles of association. The very first article says that the objects of the association are to promote the commercial, financial, industrial and other interests of the city of Indianapolis, and that is what I am going to bring about if it 'takes my legs.' I invited the City Council and Board of Public Works to the meeting to-night with the purpose of getting the members of those bodies and the members of the Board of Trade familiar with the kind of business transacted by each body and the methods employed. I want to see the Council, the Commercial Club and the Board of Trade all joining hands and working might and main towards the betterment of this city I want to see the Board of Trade estab-lished in a splendid place, easily accessible to all business men, so that during the hours of from 12 to 2 o'clock each day you can find a business men when you want him. The way it is now, if you want to see a certain man, perhaps you have to go way out to North Indianapolis, or to some other point of the compass. The European 'bourse' comes up to my ideal in most respects. There each man has a certain part of the room or a desk assigned him, at which he is always to be found during given hours."

Another member said that in his opinion the new building is one of the certainties holding out for too high a price on this building." said he. "It is not worth over forty or forty-five thousand dollars, at the outside. I understand that Mr. Kirschbaum would take it at the latter figure, i the brick walls in the first story could be removed, so that the building might be turned into a factory readily." Hon, Frank B. Posey, of Evansville, was visitor at the meeting and reception last

BURDSAL'S PAINTS

Say, now, honor bright, have you ever heard us say a word about ourselves? But we do like to talk about our Paints. Like the fond parent's kid, "it's the only;" everybody else's is ugly and not in the same class with it; talked or walked when it was a year old. Same with our Steamboat Paints. It talked right from the start, and it is the handsomest and finest that ever came down the pike, if we, the fond parent of it, do say so, and we have a few friends that will back us up. Ask any one that has made its acquaintance and hear
